

Adrian Barwick - Biography

Dip Law (SAB), LL.M (UTS), Acc Spec. (Empl and Indus)

Solicitor Director

WilliamsonBarwick

Sydney

Adrian was admitted as a Legal Practitioner of the Supreme Court of New South Wales on 1 December 1995 and has practised almost exclusively in employment and industrial law since 2001.

In October 2005, Adrian obtained specialist accreditation from the Law Society of New South Wales in Employment & Industrial Law, and has acted as an Assessor for the examination of specialist accreditation candidates.

In 2005 to 2009, Adrian was a sessional lecturer in Employment Law in the Business School of the Australian Catholic University, MacKillop Campus, North Sydney.

In July 2015, Adrian was pleased to join WilliamsonLegal as Special Counsel. With effect from July 2016, Adrian became a director of the practice, which changed its name to WilliamsonBarwick. Adrian is now the Solicitor Director of WilliamsonBarwick.

Adrian acts for a wide range of private sector, local government, indigenous corporations, not-for-profit employers and senior executives, providing advice and support at every stage of the employment relationship. He has represented many clients in litigated disputes over the years and has appeared as an advocate in the Fair Work Commission, state industrial tribunals and courts, the Federal Circuit Court of Australia and the Federal Court of Australia.

Adrian regularly presents at educational conferences on the topics of employment and industrial law, and he has been peer reviewed in Doyle's Guide as a Leading Employment Lawyer (Employee & Trade Union Representation) for 2018, 2019 and 2021.

Adrian is an active member of Naremburn Cammeray Anglican Church, which he attends with his wife and three daughters. Downtime means cooking and gardening.